

Kate & Jim's Travels with Charles

Episode #13 – Beautiful Jasper

Jasper welcomed us with a stylish sign, a friendly looking bear...

... And our first Aperol Spritz on this cross-Canada tour!

Although our campsite wasn't particularly scenic, we did have some cute visitors.

And it was a relief to realize that the mountains were obscured by clouds, not smoke.

As I looked through my photos from Jasper, I was confused by how few there were. And then I remembered: We made a video in Jasper! And caught up on blogs!

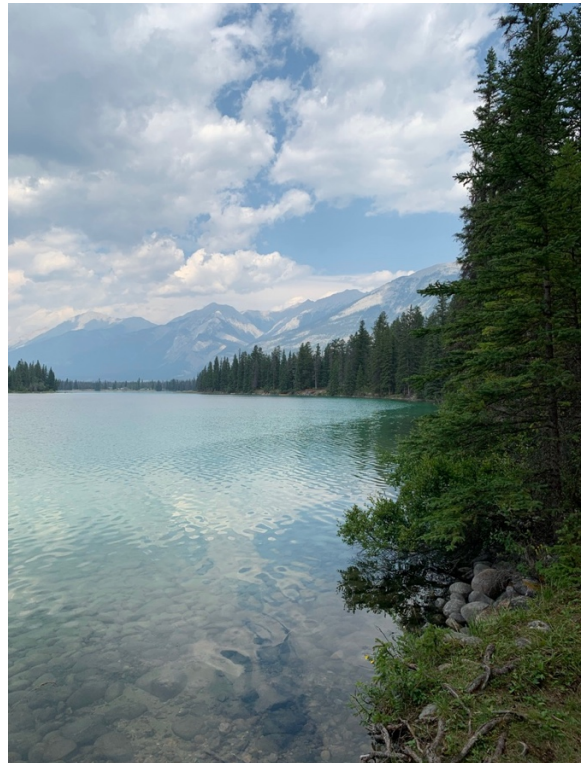

However, in between writing memoirs and shooting one hilarious moment after another, we did manage to explore some of Jasper's famous beauty. A short drive from our campsite took us to past some striking birch forests...

... and then to Edith Lake. There we went for a lovely walk. (Some might call it a hike, but that would probably be an exaggeration.)

As we walked, the views of the lake got more and more breathtaking.

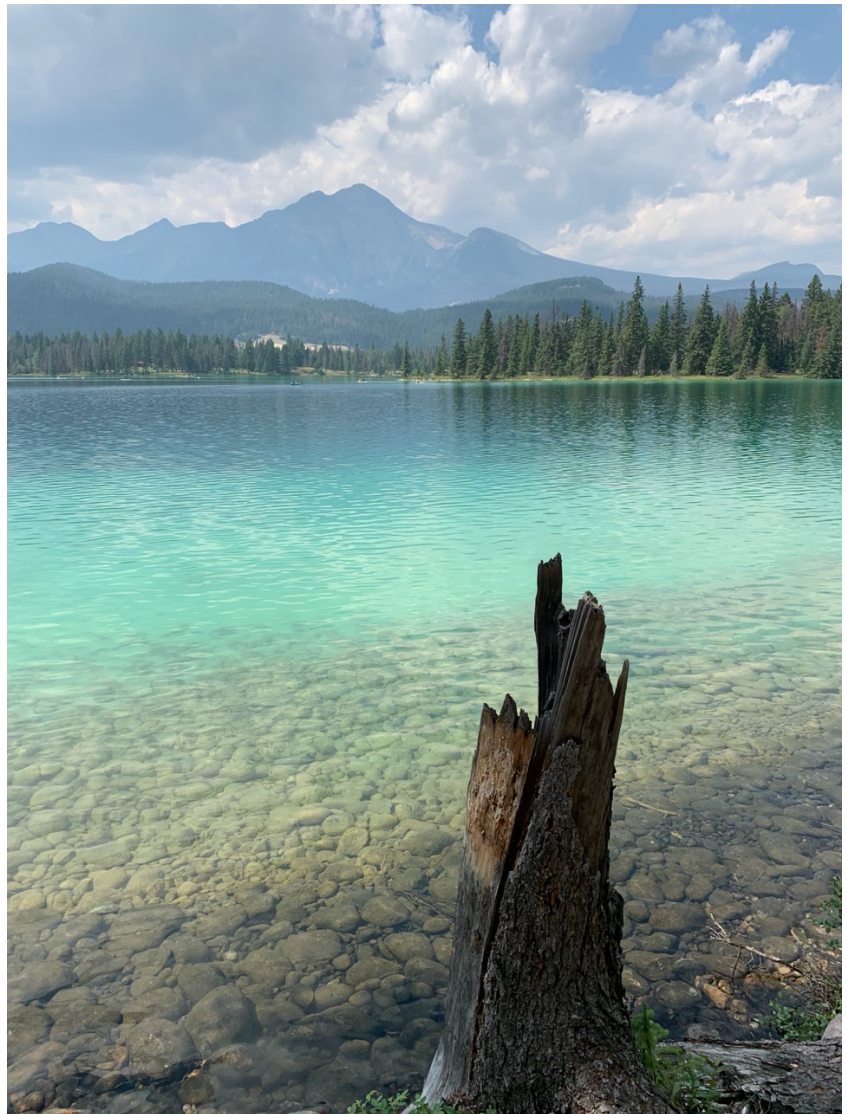

More
walking...

wonder.

And repeat...

We moved on to Pyramid Lake, which wasn't quite as spectacular, but we found a nice spot to have some lunch.

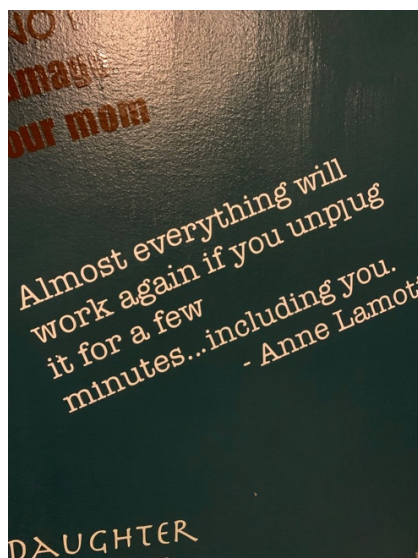

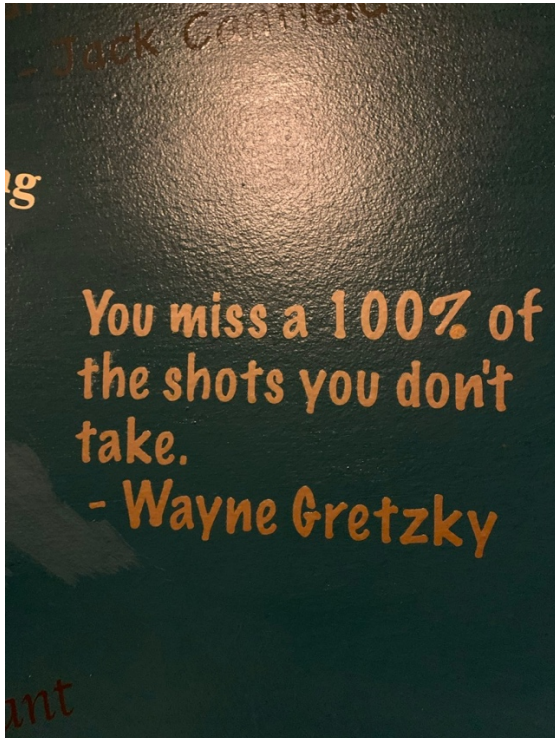

Then it was back to the serious work of video production...

On our way out of Jasper, we stopped at the landmark The Bear's Paw Bakery, where we had some yummy treats and coffee.

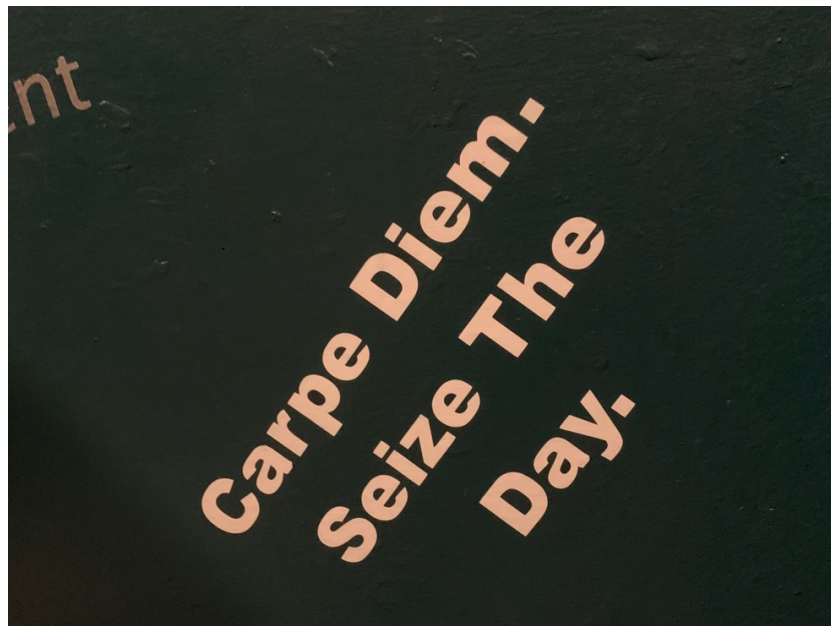

I decided I needed to hit the washroom before hitting the road. There was a sign that pointed me in the right direction, which I thought was amusing and timely. Once in the washroom, I was surrounded by signs that were also meaningful in other ways.

And then there was this...

Obviously, Jasper was the right place for us.
